

THE SHIP THAT BURNED AT SEA.

STEAMSHIP VOLTURNO, OF THE URANUM LINE, BURNED IN A RAGING STORM IN MID-ATLANTIC ON HER VOYAGE FROM ROTTERDAM TO NEW YORK WITH A LOSS OF LIFE OF 144 OF HER PASSENGERS AND CREW.

STORM CRUSHED BOATS AGAINST STEAMER'S SIDE

Women and Children Pushed Aside by Members of Crew in Eagerness to Get Places in Lifeboats.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—"All went well," said Walter Trintepohl, in telling his story, "until 6 o'clock Thursday morning when the fire alarm sounded. We were aroused and told to go on deck, as fire had broken out in the hold. On assembling, life belts were handed around, and much time was occupied in fastening them. We were told that the fire might soon be quenched, but the captain thought it wise for all to have belts as a precaution. The fire frightened the children, who cried bitterly. There were many babies in arms.

"The fire grew worse. We saw things blazing down below. About 10 o'clock there was a cry to lower the boats.

"The captain behaved splendidly. So did the officers, who were English. I am sorry to say that the crew, who were Germans and Belgians, behaved very badly. The people rushed about wildly, and the crew seemed to think they ought to have first place, and instead of quieting the passengers they made the panic worse.

Crew Eaters Boat.

"The first officer took charge of the first boat, but although he wanted the women and children saved first, the majority of those who entered the boat were members of the crew.

"This boat was smashed against the ship's side. Just as it reached the water it broke in two and all were drowned.

"Meanwhile attempts were made to lower the second boat. I cannot say who was in charge of this, but I do know that after the chief steward had thrown provisions in, he jumped in himself. There were more men than women and children in this boat, which did not go down for it was broken against the ship and all were drowned.

"These two boats were amidstships. Three other boats were put out aft. The fourth officer was in one of them but I cannot say which one. All was confusion. The ropes broke and the occupants were thrown into the water and drowned or killed. When the captain saw what had happened he cut the tackle of the other boats, so that they could not be launched.

"We were so glad when we saw the Carmania come, for we said, 'now we shall all be saved.'

"The firemen rushed up from below and refused to go back. The captain drew his revolver and drove them below, but soon after as the fire was spreading they were obliged to abandon the engines.

"As soon as the Carmania was sighted the captain made all the women and children go to one side, and the men to the other side. He had been compelled to leave the bridge and go aft because it was too hot. Women wept, shrieked, laughed and became hysterical.

"We had not thought of food but in the afternoon we considered it better to get something and went to the kitchens which we found deserted, made coffee and helped ourselves to biscuit and beef. But most of the passengers refused to eat.

"We saw rafts sent from the Carmania, but nobody told us to jump in. In fact we knew not what they were there for. About 6 o'clock the decks aft began to get very warm, then hotter and hotter. But we did not seem to feel the heat."

Boat Sole Was Burned.

When shown his boat with the sole half burned through, Trintepohl said: "I don't remember this, but it was awful when the flames burst out. Some of the men and women tore their hair, but others were quite still."

"After the explosion I thought it better to jump, for I am a good swimmer, and an English passenger and one of the crew said they would accompany me. I jumped first, they followed but I never saw them again."

"I made for the German ship, but they did not hear me. Then I came toward the Carmania and shouted, 'Help!' and was seen by the aid of the searchlight. I was about an hour in the water and became half unconscious. I knew not how I was got out."

"During the day, five sailors and one steward fell into the fire and were burned to death.

"I know nothing more. I came away because it was too hot to stay any longer and I feared the whole ship would blow up."

No Boat Got Away.

When Trintepohl was told that according to the captain's wireless message, six boats had been launched and two got away, he said, "it is not so. I was there all the time and saw everything. No boat got away."

Mr. Spurgeon, in his account tells of the attempts to get lifeboats alongside the Volturmo.

"Nothing," he said, "was seen of the two boats launched with about 20 passengers each after they left the Volturmo's side. Four others were smashed against the ship's side and the occupants either killed or drowned."

"At 9 o'clock Thursday night the captain of the Volturmo sent a despairing message which read, 'For God's sake help us or we perish.'

"By a miracle the flames did not spread to the after deck. Eventually the seas moderated and the boats saved 521 persons. The death roll numbers 136."

The wireless operator aboard the Carmania sends the following message:

Two Boats Lowered.

"Two boats were lowered from the Volturmo before the Carmania arrived and 110 passengers were lost. Disembarkation commenced before daylight. The total number lost is 136 as far as known."

A wireless from the captain of the Devonian, one of the rescuing steamers, says that he has 59 survivors aboard, comprising 15 men, 20 women and 21 children. All well. This is the same number previously reported.

A wireless from the steamer Seidlitz forwarded from Bremen says he has aboard 46 survivors instead of 36, as previously reported. This would account for the ten supposed to have been aboard the Carmania, the latter steamer having been credited with 11 survivors, while she is bringing in only one.

Among the first class passengers on the Volturmo were two Americans, John Krug and Frieda Krug.

A wireless from the Carmania to the Daily Mail thus describes the rescue of the passengers from the Volturmo.

"The boats took off in quick succession the survivors who passed one by one down the lines. Daybreak saw the arrival of two other steamers—the Car and the Narragansett. The latter, an oil tank steamer which came at full speed, took up a position slightly to the windward of the Volturmo. In a few minutes she had two large streams of oil pouring on the water. This was invaluable in helping the rescue work of the small boats around the Volturmo's stern."

"By 9 o'clock the remaining 521 had been safely taken off. Each ship went on a short cruise in different directions to scout for the missing boats, but nothing was seen of them."

That not over 550 lives was lost, was due first to the wireless and second to the speedy arrival and splendid organization of Capt. Barr of the Carmania.

Third to the splendid seamanship of the international rescue squadron. Fourth, to the Volturmo's staunch bulkheads.

Fifth, and above all to the providential moderation of the gale during Thursday night."
